

PROJECT PROPOSAL
Commission Website Continuation CART211

Carael Bandojo

Last semester we were tasked with making a website of our choice. I wanted to make a portfolio website, but was forced to use AI for any Javascript in the website since I wasn't taught how to integrate it into HTML at the time. I would like to revise the project, since it's something I think will be useful in the future.

My project was in my opinion, a failure. It is a commission/portfolio website for myself, but fails to deliver the information I want in a user friendly and personal way. So this time, using my new knowledge of JavaScript, I'd like to be able to revise both the aesthetics and functionality of my old website design.

Revised Feature: Separated Pages / Graphical Home Menu

In CART211 I was unable to use JavaScript, so all information on my portfolio site was one big block of words or pictures you'd have to scroll through. I'd like to be able to separate them based on categories. One page for a gallery, one page for an about me, one page for pricing calculations and checkout, and one page for reviews.

I will also add nicer pathways between pages to give a better user experience. Right now the layout of the overall site is very clunky and overall not very organised. There's a static menu at the top to jump between selections but the user still has to scroll through walls of text in the TOS, and some sections are not allocated as much space as they should be given for emphasis. I'd like to be able to provide a more memorable user experience.

New Feature: Separated Pages / Graphical Home Menu

Firebase was briefly introduced to us during CART211, and I would like to use it to add a new review page to the site! Users will be able to input a nickname for their comment, and rate their services 1 to 5 stars, as well as attach one or two images of their commission. The reviews will be shown publicly for other users to see. Along with a price for the commission given by the user. This feature is pretty low priority for me, since it's not required for site functionality but it is nice to have. So I won't worry too bad at the logistics of making a user log in and verify what commission they have allocated to them, just a general way of posting to a forum with premade slots for different information (stars, paragraph for reviews, paragraph for username, price, etc). I assume this would be done with JavaScript and calling different objects that contained the separate pages information.

Revised Feature: Gallery

The gallery in the current website is currently a single divider that contains a bunch of images that can't be zoomed in or organised. With the new website, I would like to be able to sort the images and allow users to zoom into them with a click. This will allow users to view the image in full resolution, and will be especially helpful for long images with background and small details. It will also allow for them to get a better scope of what they want, as they'll be able to see what I define as a “headshot”, or whatever other options I offer for my commissions. Again, this would be a gallery object with a bunch of image variables inside of it.

Revised Feature: Price Calculator

In my original proposal for the website, I wanted to integrate a price calculator for my commissions that would display a preview of what the user would get as well as its price. I wanted the user to be able to see a visual feedback of what they'd be getting, and have an easy way to calculate my general rates. I used a paypal embed to get commissions in my last version of the website, and I intend on scrapping it. I'd like users to contact me personally first instead of having them pay upfront so we can negotiate cost. The price calculator is just to give a general estimate if they're considering my work, so it is necessary to provide a way for them to message me within the calculator. The message and information they selected would be sent to me via Firebase.

Revised Feature: Terms of Service

For my website, my terms of service is currently just a big wall of text the user has to scroll through. I'd like to divide it into selections so that it's easier for a potential buyer to read, more like a book with pages. At the end of the TOS, I'd also like to direct the user to the payment section. If I have time, I would also like to direct the user to these pages and somehow verify that they've at least skimmed through them before making their final purchase.

Revised Feature: Contact Pages with Embeds

My contact page is currently six lines of text, and I'm not too fond of it! The overall goal would be to make the text into icons, and add an embed for X/Twitter since that is where I post most of my commission updates and artwork.

Then adding a small biography about myself so people know who I am as an artist, what I've worked on, what I'm passionate about, etc. I think this will make it easier for the user to contact me, and make their experience more memorable.

Please send any details you'd like included in the drawing. Be as detailed as possible.
